Dixie help's raise awareness and funds for traumatic brain injury through working with both national and local organizations, as well as through many charity events that help benefit children.

Check out her newly published book Unthinkable: A Mother's Tragedy, Terror and Triumph through a Child's Traumatic Brain Injury. A Companion for Caregivers. This book, written by Dixie Fremont-Smith Coskie on surviving brain injury from a family's perspective is powerful, moving and very real. Not only are the emotions of parents explored and revealed, but siblings are included as well.

Unthinkable will provide emotional support, hope and guidance for other families whose child has had a traumatic injury or illness. The tips for caregivers are especially useful with practical suggestions for support, communication, coping, stress reduction and problem solving at all stages of care and recovery after traumatic brain injury. Unthinkable is also highly recommended for direct care staff and professionals as it provides insights into the emotional trauma that inevitably accompanies the physical and medical trauma of brain injury.

Ross Daniel Adaptive Apparel

When Susan Kleiman began her successful career as a sales and marketing executive, she never dreamed that one day, more than 20 years later, the circumstances of her life would lead her to become an advocate, entrepreneur and fashion designer for children and teens with special needs.

In 1993, Susan delivered her first born child, Ross Daniel Kleiman. As a surviving twin, he was born 11 weeks prematurely with multiple complications resulting from a lack of oxygen in utero. Ross suffered a stroke due to twin to twin transfusion syndrome www.TTTSfoundation.org, and that was only the beginning.

With a list of debilitating challenges, including cerebral palsy, impaired vision, seizure disorder and cognitive delays, Susan's hopes and dreams for her baby were shattered, and she had to gain a new set of skills to cope with the complexities of raising a child with multiple disabilities.

Ross is now 16 years old, and Susan has spent the past 15 years helping her son beat the odds through non-traditional therapies, education and socialization.

Inspired by a need to find fashionable, comfortable and breathable socks for Ross' ankle-foot orthotics, Susan launched Ross Daniel Adaptive Apparel in 2009 to bring much needed fun, stylish and comfortable clothing options to kids that just want to be kids.

LOGAN OLSON
Founder and President of Logan Magazine

Chair of Choice
TiLite Aero X and Aero Z
(I can't pick just one)

Introducing the new TiLite Aero X

For Logan Olson, style and function are not mutually exclusive. We couldn't agree more. The new TiLite Aero X appeals to the senses, yet it is clearly designed to perform. This new folding chair showcases several TiLite innovations like the new "Tru-Fit" component clamp-on system. The innovative "Tru-Fit" system works by clamping all major components onto the frame instead of bolting them through it. The result is a frame with 50% fewer holes, creating a greater range of adjustment, improved durability and performance. And did we mention a clean stylish look that even the baggage handlers at LAX will admire.
